

South Wales Fire Training Centre.

This project required us to undertake all of the soft landscape works associated with a large new dedicated Fire Training Centre in Cardiff.

The ground was ripped to reduce compaction and the proposed planted areas were then prepared through the incorporation of spent mushroom compost.

As the building was to be handed over to the client in August, the container grown ornamental shrubs were planted out of season. We then returned in November 2005 to complete the planting of the seasonal bare rooted and root balled trees, shrubs and native transplants.

In total, over 100 No. extra heavy standard trees, approximately 7,500 No. ornamental shrubs and 6,500 No. native transplants were planted. The ornamental areas were mulched with bark upon completion. The proposed grassed areas were all seeded.

A drip line irrigation system was installed to ensure the heavy standard trees that had been planted above a gabion wall could be easily watered thus ensuring their successful establishment.

We are now maintaining the works for a period of 12 months following completion.
